

Fact File:

name: Monarch butterfly habitat: in forests

country: mexico

appearance: orange wings and black details food: nectar

why it is endangered: global warming and loss of habitat number of animals today: 80.000 in the world

An endangered animal:

My favorite endangered animal is the monarch butterfly. The Monarch butterfly lives in forests and parks. They have orange wings with black details. They eat flower's nectar. The Monarch butterfly is from Mexico forests in America. Monarch butterflies are endangered because of global warming and loss of habitat.

There are about 80.000 Monarch butterflies in the world

By Abril

This is the Monarch butterfly