

Fact file: An endangered animal

Name: Sea otter

Habitat: In the river and in the tropics

Country: Africa, Asia, North America and sometimes in South America or in Spain.

Appearance: Brown with half white face, white or brown with white face.

Food: Crabs and fish

Why it is endangered: because of hunting and poaching and oil spill from many oil tankers

Number of animals today: Does not exceed 300,000

Report: An endangered animal

My favourite endangered animal is the sea otter. Sea otters live in the river and in the tropics. Some of them are brown with half white faces and the others are white or brown with white faces. They eat crabs and fish. Sea otters are endangered because of hunting and poaching and oil spill from many oil tankers. The humans take their skin because it is special so that they do not get cold in the water. You can find sea otters in Africa, Asia, North America and sometimes in South America or in Spain. Today the number of otters doesn't exceed 300,000.

By Nerea

Sea otters eating

Baby sea otters

Baby sea otter with her mom

Sea otter

